Kezhusenu and her husband along with their three children live in Kohima. Kezhusenu is a part-time teacher in a private school and her husband works as a Group 4 employee in one of the Government Departments. Their house earlier had three rooms and a kitchen, as Kezhusenu's mother-in-law lived with them. The house was small and congested which impacted the education of her children.

The addition of extra rooms to her house became possible because of PMAY (U). Kezhusenu believes the added space has improved the family's quality of life. It enhanced their comfort and provided her children with better environment. She is delighted when asked to share her feelings on getting PMAY(U) benefits. "An extra room is not just physical walls and roof for us. It has given us and my mother-in-law the much-needed space of dignity," she says.
