

SARITA

PUNJAB

Sarita and Rajinder Singh moved from Nainital, Uttarakhand, to Amritsar, Punjab in search of job better opportunities and to raise the family. They lived in a kutchra house with his widow mother and two children. The house was small and hence, it became difficult for the family to afford a decent lifestyle. Rajinder works at a footwear shop. With his nominal income, they could only meet the daily needs of the family and educate their children.

As the couple looked for opportunities to move into a new house, Sarita learnt about PMAY(U). They built a pucca house with the help of Government fund and are now living happily.

"PMAY(U) has transformed our dreams into reality. For me, this new house has granted my family a sense of social security and now the perspective of people towards us has completely changed," says Rajinder.

"I have no words to express my feelings. I had been longing to have my own pucca house for several years but the financial constraints were always a hurdle," says Sarita, adding, "But for the assistance under PMAY(U), they would have never taken the leap of faith to invest life savings in building a house."
