UTTARAKHAND

At Vikanagar, a small town under Uttarakhand's Dehradun district, Rajni Upadhyay is a proud owner of a PMAY(U) house. She, along with her husband Bhupesh Upadhyay earlier lived in a semi - pucca house on a small patch of land they owned.

The small construction business they were involved in, did not allow them to afford building a fully pucca house with all amenities.

“Most residents in our locality run small business and we live hand to mouth, not knowing what the future entails for our financial security. A good house, however, takes away a large part of our safety and security concerns,” says Rajni Upadhyay.

The family is grateful to the PMAY (U) Scheme for bringing a ray of hope towards fulfilling their dreams of a good life. “For the not so privileged families like us, the Government's 'Housing for All' scheme has come as a blessing. We have spread the word among friends, neighbours and relatives who can avail benefits of the scheme. We want families like us to benefit from this,” says her husband. Emboldened with the confidence of living in a safe and secured house, the couple says they plan to expand their business.
